Former Spy Hunters To Meet

Former spy hunters—a bit balder and fatter—will talk over the good old days when they meet in Chicago this weekend.

One hundred World War II veterans, members of the National Counter Intelligence Corps Assn., will hold their seventh annual convention Friday, Saturday and Sunday. G. Kenneth Crowell is president of the Chicago branch, which is host to the convention.

Speakers will be Robert Bannerman, deputy director for security, Central Intelligence Agency, Washington, and Maj.-Gen. Boniface Campbell, Chief, Counter Intelligence Corps, U.S. Army.

The CIC is the Army's anti-espionage branch, which was expanded greatly during World War II.

Convention scene will be the Hotel Sherman. No spies allowed.
